

ESTABLISHED
A. D. 1736
BY WILLIAM PARKS

THE VIRGINIA GAZETTE.

BEST
ADVERTISING MEDIUM.

VOL. XI, NO. 39.

WILLIAMSBURG, VA., SATURDAY, FEB. 20, 1904.

$1.00 PER YEAR

The Richmond Business Directory

Give these Firms Your Patronage.

PHONE 1358.....

ORDER YOUR Liquors

FROM PHIL G. KELLY,
Richmond, Va.
Mail Orders
Promptly Shipped.
Straight Whiskies
A Specialty.
Clifton Springs best $2. Goods on Earth.

John F. Kohler, Jeweler.

209 E. Broad Street.

Watches, Diamonds, Jewelry and Cut Glass.

Repairing a specialty. Mail orders promptly filled.

A. C. SINTON, President.

J. J. SUTTON, Secretary

WATT PLOW COMPANY,

Farm Implements, Machinery, Vehicles and Harness.

1452 Franklin Street, Richmond, Va.

N R. SAVAGE AND SON,

No. 1215 East Cary St., Richmond, Va.

COMMISSION MERCHANTS AND WHOLESALE DEALERS IN Hay, Grain, Flour, Meal, Mill-Feed, Seed Potatoes, and all kinds of Grass Seed, Etc.

PRICES ON APPLICATION.

OUR SHOES

Shoes - think of

C. F. CROSS, - 313 E. BROAD ST

will cover much ground before they are ground out — will not hurt, but the price will tickle you. Whenever you think of

FISH THAT LEAVE THE WATER

Some Can Live a Long Time Out of Their Native Element—The "Stare-About."

It is commonly supposed that all fish die very soon after being taken from the water. There are exceptions, however, to the rule. There is the "stare-about," a kind of goby that at ebb tide walks calmly up on the sand banks erected on two huge fore fins. With his gigantic google eyes he keeps a sharp lookout for crabs and such things as are left behind by the receding water. Then we all know, says an exchange, that eels can wriggle, snake-like, miles across the meadows to other ponds and rivers.

In Holland carp are kept all winter hung up in a net and sprinkled only occasionally with water. The Indian "shake-head" is quite happy even when his native pond dries up, and lies torpid till the next rainy season. The flying gurnard will keep ahead of an ocean liner going at full speed and for many minutes in quick successive flights of 300 yards or so at a time. So, granted it as his residence when he signed the declaration of independence.

Treatment of Consumptives.

Tuberculosis may be fought by wise methods and by foolish ones. To the latter class belongs the plan which the Australian colony of Victoria is said to have adopted. It is proposed to isolate consumptives, whether they like it or not, and send them to a quarantine station. Educating them in regard to the proper precautions of avoiding the spread of infection would be far more sensible.—N. Y. Tribune.

Tanner Paint and Oil Company,
P. O. Box 180. 1419 East Main Street.
Paints, Varnishes, Oils

* * and Brushes.

Steam Dyeing, Scouring
& Carpet Cleaning Works

Richmond. — Carolina
Men's Suits cleaned and pressed. $1.00
" " Dyed, 2.00
Dresses, Cloaks, Ribbons, Gloves, and Plumies, etc., cleaned or dyed.

Suits or small packages sent to the Gazette Office will be brought and turned FREE OF CHARGE!

MRS. A. J. FULLER,
1435 N. 5th St., Richmond, Va.

After eating I went out and watched the Eskimo boys at play. One youth, fastening a piece of bark to a harpoon raised it above his head. This was a target. Another boy withdrew some distance, balanced his harpoon and, with splendid aim, sent it through the bark. I took part in the sport, my clumsiness causing the greatest amusement. The harpoon is as necessary to the young Eskimo as the pocketknife to a schoolboy in civilization. Throwing the weapon is their play. They are ever practicing so that when they reach manhood they are perfect hunters.—World's Work.

Eskimo Boys at Play.

After eating I went out and watched the Eskimo boys at play. One youth, fastening a piece of bark to a harpoon raised it above his head. This was a target. Another boy withdrew some distance, balanced his harpoon and, with splendid aim, sent it through the bark. I took part in the sport, my clumsiness causing the greatest amusement. The harpoon is as necessary to the young Eskimo as the pocketknife to a schoolboy in civilization. Throwing the weapon is their play. They are ever practicing so that when they reach manhood they are perfect hunters.—World's Work.

Eskimo Boys at Play.

After eating I went out and watched the Eskimo boys at play. One youth, fastening a piece of bark to a harpoon raised it above his head. This was a target. Another boy withdrew some distance, balanced his harpoon and, with splendid aim, sent it through the bark. I took part in the sport, my clumsiness causing the greatest amusement. The harpoon is as necessary to the young Eskimo as the pocketknife to a schoolboy in civilization. Throwing the weapon is their play. They are ever practicing so that when they reach manhood they are perfect hunters.—World's Work.

Eskimo Boys at Play.

After eating I went out and watched the Eskimo boys at play. One youth, fastening a piece of bark to a harpoon raised it above his head. This was a target. Another boy withdrew some distance, balanced his harpoon and, with splendid aim, sent it through the bark. I took part in the sport, my clumsiness causing the greatest amusement. The harpoon is as necessary to the young Eskimo as the pocketknife to a schoolboy in civilization. Throwing the weapon is their play. They are ever practicing so that when they reach manhood they are perfect hunters.—World's Work.

Eskimo Boys at Play.

After eating I went out and watched the Eskimo boys at play. One youth, fastening a piece of bark to a harpoon raised it above his head. This was a target. Another boy withdrew some distance, balanced his harpoon and, with splendid aim, sent it through the bark. I took part in the sport, my clumsiness causing the greatest amusement. The harpoon is as necessary to the young Eskimo as the pocketknife to a schoolboy in civilization. Throwing the weapon is their play. They are ever practicing so that when they reach manhood they are perfect hunters.—World's Work.

Eskimo Boys at Play.

After eating I went out and watched the Eskimo boys at play. One youth, fastening a piece of bark to a harpoon raised it above his head. This was a target. Another boy withdrew some distance, balanced his harpoon and, with splendid aim, sent it through the bark. I took part in the sport, my clumsiness causing the greatest amusement. The harpoon is as necessary to the young Eskimo as the pocketknife to a schoolboy in civilization. Throwing the weapon is their play. They are ever practicing so that when they reach manhood they are perfect hunters.—World's Work.

Eskimo Boys at Play.

After eating I went out and watched the Eskimo boys at play. One youth, fastening a piece of bark to a harpoon raised it above his head. This was a target. Another boy withdrew some distance, balanced his harpoon and, with splendid aim, sent it through the bark. I took part in the sport, my clumsiness causing the greatest amusement. The harpoon is as necessary to the young Eskimo as the pocketknife to a schoolboy in civilization. Throwing the weapon is their play. They are ever practicing so that when they reach manhood they are perfect hunters.—World's Work.

Eskimo Boys at Play.

After eating I went out and watched the Eskimo boys at play. One youth, fastening a piece of bark to a harpoon raised it above his head. This was a target. Another boy withdrew some distance, balanced his harpoon and, with splendid aim, sent it through the bark. I took part in the sport, my clumsiness causing the greatest amusement. The harpoon is as necessary to the young Eskimo as the pocketknife to a schoolboy in civilization. Throwing the weapon is their play. They are ever practicing so that when they reach manhood they are perfect hunters.—World's Work.

Eskimo Boys at Play.

After eating I went out and watched the Eskimo boys at play. One youth, fastening a piece of bark to a harpoon raised it above his head. This was a target. Another boy withdrew some distance, balanced his harpoon and, with splendid aim, sent it through the bark. I took part in the sport, my clumsiness causing the greatest amusement. The harpoon is as necessary to the young Eskimo as the pocketknife to a schoolboy in civilization. Throwing the weapon is their play. They are ever practicing so that when they reach manhood they are perfect hunters.—World's Work.

Eskimo Boys at Play.

After eating I went out and watched the Eskimo boys at play. One youth, fastening a piece of bark to a harpoon raised it above his head. This was a target. Another boy withdrew some distance, balanced his harpoon and, with splendid aim, sent it through the bark. I took part in the sport, my clumsiness causing the greatest amusement. The harpoon is as necessary to the young Eskimo as the pocketknife to a schoolboy in civilization. Throwing the weapon is their play. They are ever practicing so that when they reach manhood they are perfect hunters.—World's Work.

Eskimo Boys at Play.

After eating I went out and watched the Eskimo boys at play. One youth, fastening a piece of bark to a harpoon raised it above his head. This was a target. Another boy withdrew some distance, balanced his harpoon and, with splendid aim, sent it through the bark. I took part in the sport, my clumsiness causing the greatest amusement. The harpoon is as necessary to the young Eskimo as the pocketknife to a schoolboy in civilization. Throwing the weapon is their play. They are ever practicing so that when they reach manhood they are perfect hunters.—World's Work.

Eskimo Boys at Play.

After eating I went out and watched the Eskimo boys at play. One youth, fastening a piece of bark to a harpoon raised it above his head. This was a target. Another boy withdrew some distance, balanced his harpoon and, with splendid aim, sent it through the bark. I took part in the sport, my clumsiness causing the greatest amusement. The harpoon is as necessary to the young Eskimo as the pocketknife to a schoolboy in civilization. Throwing the weapon is their play. They are ever practicing so that when they reach manhood they are perfect hunters.—World's Work.

Eskimo Boys at Play.

After eating I went out and watched the Eskimo boys at play. One youth, fastening a piece of bark to a harpoon raised it above his head. This was a target. Another boy withdrew some distance, balanced his harpoon and, with splendid aim, sent it through the bark. I took part in the sport, my clumsiness causing the greatest amusement. The harpoon is as necessary to the young Eskimo as the pocketknife to a schoolboy in civilization. Throwing the weapon is their play. They are ever practicing so that when they reach manhood they are perfect hunters.—World's Work.

Eskimo Boys at Play.

After eating I went out and watched the Eskimo boys at play. One youth, fastening a piece of bark to a harpoon raised it above his head. This was a target. Another boy withdrew some distance, balanced his harpoon and, with splendid aim, sent it through the bark. I took part in the sport, my clumsiness causing the greatest amusement. The harpoon is as necessary to the young Eskimo as the pocketknife to a schoolboy in civilization. Throwing the weapon is their play. They are ever practicing so that when they reach manhood they are perfect hunters.—World's Work.

Eskimo Boys at Play.

After eating I went out and watched the Eskimo boys at play. One youth, fastening a piece of bark to a harpoon raised it above his head. This was a target. Another boy withdrew some distance, balanced his harpoon and, with splendid aim, sent it through the bark. I took part in the sport, my clumsiness causing the greatest amusement. The harpoon is as necessary to the young Eskimo as the pocketknife to a schoolboy in civilization. Throwing the weapon is their play. They are ever practicing so that when they reach manhood they are perfect hunters.—World's Work.

Eskimo Boys at Play.

After eating I went out and watched the Eskimo boys at play. One youth, fastening a piece of bark to a harpoon raised it above his head. This was a target. Another boy withdrew some distance, balanced his harpoon and, with splendid aim, sent it through the bark. I took part in the sport, my clumsiness causing the greatest amusement. The harpoon is as necessary to the young Eskimo as the pocketknife to a schoolboy in civilization. Throwing the weapon is their play. They are ever practicing so that when they reach manhood they are perfect hunters.—World's Work.

Eskimo Boys at Play.

After eating I went out and watched the Eskimo boys at play. One youth, fastening a piece of bark to a harpoon raised it above his head. This was a target. Another boy withdrew some distance, balanced his harpoon and, with splendid aim, sent it through the bark. I took part in the sport, my clumsiness causing the greatest amusement. The harpoon is as necessary to the young Eskimo as the pocketknife to a schoolboy in civilization. Throwing the weapon is their play. They are ever practicing so that when they reach manhood they are perfect hunters.—World's Work.

Eskimo Boys at Play.

After eating I went out and watched the Eskimo boys at play. One youth, fastening a piece of bark to a harpoon raised it above his head. This was a target. Another boy withdrew some distance, balanced his harpoon and, with splendid aim, sent it through the bark. I took part in the sport, my clumsiness causing the greatest amusement. The harpoon is as necessary to the young Eskimo as the pocketknife to a schoolboy in civilization. Throwing the weapon is their play. They are ever practicing so that when they reach manhood they are perfect hunters.—World's Work.

Eskimo Boys at Play.

After eating I went out and watched the Eskimo boys at play. One youth, fastening a piece of bark to a harpoon raised it above his head. This was a target. Another boy withdrew some distance, balanced his harpoon and, with splendid aim, sent it through the bark. I took part in the sport, my clumsiness causing the greatest amusement. The harpoon is as necessary to the young Eskimo as the pocketknife to a schoolboy in civilization. Throwing the weapon is their play. They are ever practicing so that when they reach manhood they are perfect hunters.—World's Work.

Eskimo Boys at Play.

After eating I went out and watched the Eskimo boys at play. One youth, fastening a piece of bark to a harpoon raised it above his head. This was a target. Another boy withdrew some distance, balanced his harpoon and, with splendid aim, sent it through the bark. I took part in the sport, my clumsiness causing the greatest amusement. The harpoon is as necessary to the young Eskimo as the pocketknife to a schoolboy in civilization. Throwing the weapon is their play. They are ever practicing so that when they reach manhood they are perfect hunters.—World's Work.

Eskimo Boys at Play.

After eating I went out and watched the Eskimo boys at play. One youth, fastening a piece of bark to a harpoon raised it above his head. This was a target. Another boy withdrew some distance, balanced his harpoon and, with splendid aim, sent it through the bark. I took part in the sport, my clumsiness causing the greatest amusement. The harpoon is as necessary to the young Eskimo as the pocketknife to a schoolboy in civilization. Throwing the weapon is their play. They are ever practicing so that when they reach manhood they are perfect hunters.—World's Work.

Eskimo Boys at Play.

After eating I went out and watched the Eskimo boys at play. One youth, fastening a piece of bark to a harpoon raised it above his head. This was a target. Another boy withdrew some distance, balanced his harpoon and, with splendid aim, sent it through the bark. I took part in the sport, my clumsiness causing the greatest amusement. The harpoon is as necessary to the young Eskimo as the pocketknife to a schoolboy in civilization. Throwing the weapon is their play. They are ever practicing so that when they reach manhood they are perfect hunters.—World's Work.

Eskimo Boys at Play.

After eating I went out and watched the Eskimo boys at play. One youth, fastening a piece of bark to a harpoon raised it above his head. This was a target. Another boy withdrew some distance, balanced his harpoon and, with splendid aim, sent it through the bark. I took part in the sport, my clumsiness causing the greatest amusement. The harpoon is as necessary to the young Eskimo as the pocketknife to a schoolboy in civilization. Throwing the weapon is their play. They are ever practicing so that when they reach manhood they are perfect hunters.—World's Work.

Eskimo Boys at Play.

After eating I went out and watched the Eskimo boys at play. One youth, fastening a piece of bark to a harpoon raised it above his head. This was a target. Another boy withdrew some distance, balanced his harpoon and, with splendid aim, sent it through the bark. I took part in the sport, my clumsiness causing the greatest amusement. The harpoon is as necessary to the young Eskimo as the pocketknife to a schoolboy in civilization. Throwing the weapon is their play. They are ever practicing so that when they reach manhood they are perfect hunters.—World's Work.

Eskimo Boys at Play.

After eating I went out and watched the Eskimo boys at play. One youth, fastening a piece of bark to a harpoon raised it above his head. This was a target. Another boy withdrew some distance, balanced his harpoon and, with splendid aim, sent it through the bark. I took part in the sport, my clumsiness causing the greatest amusement. The harpoon is as necessary to the young Eskimo as the pocketknife to a schoolboy in civilization. Throwing the weapon is their play. They are ever practicing so that when they reach manhood they are perfect hunters.—World's Work.

Eskimo Boys at Play.

After eating I went out and watched the Eskimo boys at play. One youth, fastening a piece of bark to a harpoon raised it above his head. This was a target. Another boy withdrew some distance, balanced his harpoon and, with splendid aim, sent it through the bark. I took part in the sport, my clumsiness causing the greatest amusement. The harpoon is as necessary to the young Eskimo as the pocketknife to a schoolboy in civilization. Throwing the weapon is their play. They are ever practicing so that when they reach manhood they are perfect hunters.—World's Work.

Eskimo Boys at Play.

After eating I went out and watched the Eskimo boys at play. One youth, fastening a piece of bark to a harpoon raised it above his head. This was a target. Another boy withdrew some distance, balanced his harpoon and, with splendid aim, sent it through the bark. I took part in the sport, my clumsiness causing the greatest amusement. The harpoon is as necessary to the young Eskimo as the pocketknife to a schoolboy in civilization. Throwing the weapon is their play. They are ever practicing so that when they reach manhood they are perfect hunters.—World's Work.

Eskimo Boys at Play.

After eating I went out and watched the Eskimo boys at play. One youth, fastening a piece of bark to a harpoon raised it above his head. This was a target. Another boy withdrew some distance, balanced his harpoon and, with splendid aim, sent it through the bark. I took part in the sport, my clumsiness causing the greatest amusement. The harpoon is as necessary to the young Eskimo as the pocketknife to a schoolboy in civilization. Throwing the weapon is their play. They are ever practicing so that when they reach manhood they are perfect hunters.—World's Work.

Eskimo Boys at Play.

After eating I went out and watched the Eskimo boys at play. One youth, fastening a piece of bark to a harpoon raised it above his head. This was a target. Another boy withdrew some distance, balanced his harpoon and, with splendid aim, sent it through the bark. I took part in the sport, my clumsiness causing the greatest amusement. The harpoon is as necessary to the young Eskimo as the pocketknife to a schoolboy in civilization. Throwing the weapon is their play. They are ever practicing so that when they reach man